Aim: to publicize Chinese higher education to American high school graduates and university students and graduates.

To further attract more international students to study in China, China Scholarship Council (CSC) organizes Chinese universities to hold China Higher Education Exhibition in many countries. In 2011, CSC successfully organized Chinese Universities to hold or participate in education exhibition in Malaysia, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Mongolia, Saudi Arabia, Greece, Turkey, Austria, France, Kenya and South Africa.

There is a unique reason for holding education exhibition in USA. In 2009, US President Barack Obama announced a new exchange initiatives with China, known as "A Hundred Thousand Strong Initiative".

According to this program, during the next four years, the US will encourage in total one hundred thousand American students, about 25,000 students per year for short time or degree program study in China. The exhibition will serve this purpose as well.

After over three decades of Reform and Opening up, higher education in China has made great achievements in both teaching and research, which are widely recognized by the world and has attracted more and more international students to study in China. In 2010, the total number of students studying in China exceeded 260,000. The Chinese universities presented in this Education Exhibition do have highly qualified faculty, strong research capacity, efficient management system and comfortable learning environment. Apart from these, many of their courses can be conducted in English.

We are convinced that the China Education Exhibition will provide a good chance for Americans to know more about Chinese higher education and Chinese universities.

In addition, there are various forms of scholarships available, such as the Chinese government scholarships, and scholarships from local governments and universities. Visitors can come and talk with the representatives from Chinese universities about the possibility of study and scholarships.
